PRECEDES IN SOCIAL FUNCTIONS.

This Deference to the Members of the Upper House Galls the Representative - Blocking Legislation. Ancedote of J. L. Wilson.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 2 .- [Special.] Representatives in the lower house of congress receive the same compensationery and other allowances that members of the senate are given. But there the similarity ends in the two posittons. The prominence of senators over representatives is everywhere acknowledged. It is the senators who are given the right of way in all de partments and the precedence in all so cial functions. Cabinet officers grant more time to senators than to repre sentatives, and some subordinates will take great pains to please a senator where they will almost ignore a representative. There are of course many reasons for this. There are only 90 senators and 357 representatives. The senators are elected for six years, and often serve three times that period while a representative passing through the biennial election furnace is fortunate if he is returned a third or fourth time. The senators have more influence because they have more power. A representative, even if joined by a dozen of his fellow representatives, is unable to block the wheels of legislation or to prevent any measure from passing. A single senator earnestly antagonistic to a measure can postpone, i not defeat, it.

Incidents of One Man Power. This one man power is exhibited it the closing days of a congress when the session will expire at noon on March 4, and all legislation not passed and signed fails. At the close of the last congress Senator Warren of Wy oming was able to hold up the river and harbor bill until 2 o'clock on the morning of March 4 and could have defeated it had he not yielded to the will cure personal solicitation of senators hav ing appropriations in the bill.

Friends of Adjutant General Corbin wanted his office advanced to the rank of major general and tried to get an amendment to that effect upon the army bill that passed late in the session, but the single objection and determined stand of Senator Pettus of Alabama prevented the amendment from being adopted. The bill could have been defeated and an extra ses sion forced by one man. Senators Gorman and Cockrell at the same time practically dictated to the majority what the bill should contain before they would allow it to pass.

Senator Butler of North Carolina. alone and unaided, prevented the confirmation of Hamilton G. Ewart as And I know by the keel of that hideous Night classes Friday at 7 p. m. sjtf talking against time.

It Makes Them Tired.

There are a great many representatives to whom this deference to senators is very galling. It makes them weary when told that some proposition which they present to a department is satisfactory and proper, and if they "will only get one of your senators to Washington, chafed under this con. any hour of the day or night. stant reference of all requests to the senators. Having been Indiana born and an early freend of President Harrison, he thought some little consideration should be shown him. "Mr. President," he said one day, "I would like to get just one little thing done, just one little appointment without trotting around after the senators from my state to get their approval." But Har rison, who was once a senator, replied "The senate is part of the appointing power. I cannot break down the rule that I have established." And Wilson dashed out muttering words which would have made Harrison's Presby terian blood run cold if he had heard them. It happened that the same day hue a vote was to be taken in the house affecting silver. Wilson was against the silver side, and Senator Power of Mon-

"See here," thundered Wilson, who, though very small, had a voice like a lion, "I'm senator ridden enough from my own state, and I'll not allow another senator to get on top of me. You are one man I can lick, and I'll do it if you bother me again."

Some Are Recognized. Of course it must be understood that some of the representatives-in fact. all those who by long service tave at tained the rank of leaders-are given equal precedence with senators in the departments and, in fact, everywhere save in social life, where the wor "senator" means almest as much as "cabinet officer" or "d'planat." senators entertain more than the rep resentatives, and that makes all the difference in the world with the "soci-The man who furnishes food and drink to the multitude is most popular.
